* The Voynich Manuscript (MS 408):
*
* EVA language corpus (as derived from T.Takahashi's transcription):
* 27-gram special analysis.
*

* Results in expressions (lexems) of length 27 down to 3,
* including delimiting word separators,
* disregarding particles within higher orders
* from processing in lower ones (non-repetitive).

* Special edition:
* Contains even words/expressions occurring only once (hapaxes) in VMs.
* Created by complete N-gramming followed by a similarity sort.

* The output data looks like:

* > .qokeor.shedy. (2*14)
* > .qokor.shedy. (2*13)
* > .qokol.shedy. (2*13)
* and
* > .chckhy.daiin. (4*14)
* > .chckhy.saiin. (2*14)
* > .chckhy.okaiin. (2*15)
*

* Even showing identical expressions separated into multiple parts:

* > .ol.s.aiin. (3*11)
* > .olsaiin. (2*9)
* > .chey.kain. (4*11)
* > .cheykain. (1*10)

* The representation is particularly well suited to identify spelling errors
* of the author or of transcribers. When we see a frequently occurring word, and * nearby a single unique word written slightly differently, then it is very likely that
* this single word should be regarded as faulty.

**

*

* Input data: all control characters, punctuation,
* replaced by only one delimiter (= normalization) .
*

*

* The list below is ordered by similarity, see above !
* In parentheses (frequency of occurrence * item length-including separators-)
*

* Software tools used: ngraman 3 27 -r -p -1; simlis -w97,127 -f -p
